

BACKPACK FULL OF CASH

A new documentary film that explores the real cost of privatizing America's public schools

Narrated by Matt Damon

SNEAK PREVIEWS THIS APRIL

Dear Friends and Supporters,

We are pleased to announce sneak previews of BACKPACK FULL OF CASH at two events this April: the American Educational Research Association (AERA) 2016 Annual Meeting in Washington, DC and the Network for Public Education (NPE) 2016 Conference in Raleigh, NC. BACKPACK producers Sarah Mondale and Vera Aronow will present the screenings and participate in panel discussions with academics, activists and leaders in public education advocacy.

BACKPACK features interviews with historian Diane Ravitch, policy analyst Linda Darling Hammond, and journalist David Kirp, as it follows students, parents, teachers and activists through the tumultuous 2013-14 school year in Philadelphia and other cities, giving viewers an inside look at how a well-organized coalition of "reformers" is undermining America's public schools.

Visit our Website

AERA 2016 ANNUAL MEETING

Backpack Full of Cash: Sneak preview of documentary film

Tuesday, April 12, 2016 at the DC Convention Center in Washington, DC

12:25PM to 1:55PM — Level two

The filmmakers who made the highly acclaimed PBS SCHOOL series about the history of public education will preview their new documentary BACKPACK FULL OF CASH, and discuss how they involved researchers and research in the making of the film.

NPE 2016 NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Backpack Full of Cash: Preview screening of the 90 minute fine cut

Saturday, April 16, 2016 at the Raleigh
Convention Center in Raleigh, NC

3:55PM to 5:25PM — Room to be announced

The Network for Public Education

We are excited to offer preview screenings of BACKPACK FULL OF CASH for audiences at these two events and hope to see you there!

Thank you.

Sarah Mondale - Stone Lantern Films and Vera Aronow - Turnstone Productions

Producers

www.BackpackFullofCash.com

STAY CONNECTED

